The bit sits particularly calmly in the mouth, as the shanks prevent the bit from slipping through the mouth and avoid uncomfortable pressure on the molars. The mouthpiece exerts optimal pressure on the central point of the tongue, ensuring that rein aids are transmitted effectively. The fine olive (center piece) allows for precise contact with the center of the tongue. Rein aids are conveyed accurately to the horse. The bit fosters the horse's trust in the rider's hand and enhances confidence. In addition, the rider's lateral rein aids are positively supported; the horse stays on the bit and receives additional support during turns. The upper section of the bars is curved outward and points away from the horse's head to prevent unwanted pressure in this area.

Dynamic RS bits are suitable for horses with contact issues. Thanks to the ergonomic shaping of the mouthpiece, they fit very comfortably in the mouth. The pressure from the rein aids is distributed evenly across the tongue and the edges of the tongue,
