Anatomically Shaped Streamline Close Contact Jumping Saddle Pad
The anatomically shaped Streamline Close Contact Jumping Saddle Pad offers exceptional comfort under the saddle. The saddle pad reaches its full potential when used with the matching saddle component (included in the package).
Streamline Technology
Streamline Technology was developed to ensure a stable connection between the saddle pad and the saddle and to minimize slipping and friction. Thanks to the Velcro strip along the top line in the lumbar region, combined with the saddle component, it provides unprecedented comfort under the saddle. While riding, the saddle pad remains in place and does not ride up onto the withers or into the horse’s lumbar region. This protects the sensitive area around the spine and allows the horse freedom of movement. The flat profile of the entire saddle pad also contributes to this effect, supporting a stable connection to the saddle and preventing slipping and friction. The Streamline Close Contact Jumping Saddle Pad features a soft velour trim, a stylish piping, reinforced girth and spine channel areas, and adjustable snap-button fasteners on the girth rings. In addition to the Streamline saddle pad, the package includes the corresponding saddle component.
Attachment in Just a Few Steps
Thanks to the innovative and easy-to-use system, the Streamline saddle pads can be attached to the saddle in just a few steps.

- First, insert the saddle component by hand into the area between the panels and the tree.
- The Velcro strip on the top line in the lumbar region of the saddle pad can now be secured to the corresponding part of the saddle component.
- The adjustable snap-button fasteners allow for secure attachment to the girth rings.
