A saddle pad made of genuine lambskin is the ideal pad for riding. Lambskin is hypoallergenic and antiseptic, allowing even horses with sensitive skin to wear a saddle pad. In addition, lambskin promotes blood circulation in the horse's muscles. Thanks to its natural structure, the fleece massages the horse's back while riding. Furthermore, no heat builds up under genuine lambskin. Due to its natural structure, the fleece helps regulate temperature, and horses do not start sweating as quickly under the lambskin. A saddle pad made of genuine lambskin also has the special property of retaining its shape. This means that the lambskin regains its shape after every ride. The saddle pommel pads apply pressure in very specific spots, compressing the lambskin. Despite sweat, the shape is maintained. Even when the saddle rests on the lambskin and the fur is compressed by the jolts of riding, high-quality lambskin does not come apart but retains its shape and is merely compressed. As a result, the pad is highly shock-absorbent,
