Highly concentrated, high-calorie supplemental feed.
Provides horses with extra calories for good health and improved performance. Traditionally, horses that needed more calories for increased performance were fed more concentrated feed. These excessive amounts of concentrated feed can lead to digestive problems, such as colic, diarrhea, or laminitis. Due to their sugar content, horses can become “hot” and hyperactive. Recent research has identified the benefits of adding more fats to a horse’s diet.

- Maintenance and improvement of body weight
- Improvement of skin, coat, and overall well-being
- Easy to digest
- No risk of colic
